JUDGE OF THE ROYAL COURT

Royal Court, Guernsey

INTRODUCTION

The Office of Judge of the Royal Court was created in 2008. The functions and powers of the Judge of the Royal Court are set out in The Royal Court (Reform) (Guernsey) Law, 2008.

The Judge of the Royal Court may, on being authorised by the Bailiff, preside over the Royal Court and discharge any judicial function of the Bailiff. Judicial work in the Royal Court is shared between the Bailiff, Deputy Bailiff, Judge of the Royal Court and Lieutenant-Bailiffs. Therefore, the Judge of the Royal Court will preside routinely on the full range of cases in the Royal Court and will, as the need arises, constitute the Magistrate's Court. The nature of the work of both Courts is set out in the Annex.

The Judge of the Royal Court is appointed by the Royal Court under the provisions of The Royal Court (Reform) (Guernsey) Law, 2008 Law. It is envisaged that the appointment will be made with a retirement age of 68, which may thereafter be extended by the Court to the age of 70, unless the successful candidate were to request initial appointment to a lower age, not being below 65.

THE POSITION

A vacancy will arise in February 2020 on the retirement of Judge Finch OBE. A replacement is sought to take office in early 2020, if possible, in order to provide for a period of hand-over and familiarisation with the work of the Royal Court. Whilst the workload is for one full-time equivalent, the Royal Court may consider making two part-time appointments. The successful candidate(s) must be prepared to work in all areas and cannot expect to specialise in one main area of law.

STATUTORY ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA

To be eligible for the office of Judge of the Royal Court, applicants must have been in practice as:

- a Solicitor of the Supreme Court / Senior Courts of England and Wales, of the Court of Judicature of Northern Ireland, or in Scotland, for not less than 10 years (or such shorter period as the Royal Court may agree to in any particular case).

RELEVANT PREVIOUS EXPERIENCE

In addition to the above, the successful candidate(s) is likely to have extensive experience of appearing before or working in the Royal Court, Magistrate's Court, and/or, if applicable, equivalent courts in the part of the United Kingdom where he or she practises or sits. The successful candidate(s) should be ready for full-time judicial office in a small jurisdiction with the ability to live within the constraints that such an appointment brings to personal and social life. For an applicant who has been practising in the United Kingdom, any previous judicial experience would be an advantage but is not regarded as essential. Training will be provided as required.

(b) THE MAGISTRATES' COURT

In addition to the role in the Royal Court, the Judge of the Royal Court is expected also to sit from time to time in the Magistrate's Court.

The Magistrate's Court is constituted under the provisions of the Magistrate's Court (Guernsey) Law, 2008 ("the 2008 Law"). The Court is presided over by a Judge of the Magistrate's Court, as appointed by the Royal Court. The work of a Judge of the Magistrate's Court involves a wide spectrum of criminal, family and other civil law cases.

There are currently two full time Judges of the Magistrate's Court who both work in all areas of jurisdiction of the Magistrate's Court. It is the responsibility of the Judge of the Magistrate's Court to be sole judge of the facts and the law and to deliver a reasoned and balanced decision and/or judgment.

Jurisdiction of the Magistrate's Court

The Magistrate's Court was established in 1925 to take over the jurisdiction "en Police Correctionnelle" of the lower division of the Royal Court together with petty debts and holding inquests. There was later added a jurisdiction in matters relating to domestic proceedings similar to that applied in England. The jurisdiction was further amended under the provisions of the 2008 Law.

Criminal Court

The Magistrate's Court generally exercises summary jurisdiction in criminal law cases which are liable to attract a sentence of a maximum of two years (three years in the aggregate where sentencing in respect of more than one offence) and/or a fine not exceeding twice level 5 of the uniform scale. However, there are a number of Laws that provide the Judge with the authority to pass a sentence with a higher fine. The Magistrate's Court conducts committal proceedings in respect of matters to be tried by the Royal Court.

Civil Court

The Magistrate's Court has jurisdiction in civil matters where the sum in dispute does not exceed £10,000. These are commonly known as petty debt cases. The Court hears applications under The Access to Neighbouring Land (Guernsey) Law, 2016.

Family Law Matters

The Magistrate's Court exercises jurisdiction in a range of private and public law family matters. These include child maintenance payments, issues relating to child residence and contact and many other issues which arise from time to time when a relationship breaks down. In public law matters, the Magistrate's Court sitting as the Juvenile Court hears referrals and appeals from the Child, Youth and Community Tribunal and applications brought by the Committee for Health & Social Care for Community Parenting Orders.

Inquests

The Magistrate's Court holds inquests into deaths, at the request of the Law Officers of the Crown who are responsible for the preliminary investigations into all sudden deaths where the deceased person may have either met an unnatural or violent end, died in prison, or in other circumstances where for some reason a doctor cannot sign a death certificate. The Law Officers of the Crown decide whether an inquest will be held, what evidence should be placed before the inquest, and generally arrange for the presentation of the case by the Police.

Juvenile Court (Criminal)

The Juvenile Court is part of the Magistrate's Court and will sit to consider cases involving juveniles (under the age of 18) who are charged with criminal offences. The Juvenile Court is not open to the public and only those directly involved in the case will normally attend the Court sitting.
